THE FATE OF ODESSA IS STILL IN DOUBT

Red Flag Floats in Front of Strike-Ridden City After Bombardment.

ALL RUSSIA AGHAST AT AWFUL TURN OF AFFAIRS IN THE EMPIRE

1000 Mutinous Sailors and Troops Have Been Fighting Since Tuesday.

LIBAU, June 30.—A strong force of infantry, reinforced by machine guns, is besieging four thousand mutinous sailors from Port Alexander III, who are in a small wood near the port.

The fight has been in progress for some time and the outcome is unknown.

The mutiny started Tuesday night, when the sailors revolted against Badford, seized the government stores and secured arms and ammunition. The troops then attacked the mutinous sailors, who were driven back in the woods and surrounded.

TEMPORARILY IN CHECK.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 30.—The government has received word from Odessa that the military has succeeded in getting the upper hand over the strikers. The authorities express fear, however, that rioting will be renewed at any moment.

QUIET AT ODESSA.

ODESSA, June 30.—There is a temporary lull in the rioting, and the city is quiet at present. The strikers are not overawed, but are only cowed for the moment by the presence of a large number of troops armed with machine guns.

The bombardment last night by the Kniaz Potemkin did little damage to the city. Few shots were fired, and two buildings were struck by the shells.

The warship still has its guns pointed toward the city as a constant menace.

Formal notice was served today on the commandant of the troops that if there is a renewal of the massacre of people by the soldiers the bombardment will be renewed and continued until the soldiers are driven from the city.

Official Report at Washington.

Washington, June 30.—Ambassador Meyer, of St. Petersburg, sends the following report of the situation at Odessa: "Six officers of the Potemkin were killed, eight liberated, and the remainder are prisoners. The fleet has not arrived at Odessa harbor, which is largely destroyed by fire. Many Russian steamers were burned."

Strike at Kishineff.

BUCHAREST, June 30.—A message from Kishineff says that a general strike has been declared there. Cossacks have seized the place and General Czernotzki, chief of the Bessarabian Gendarmeries was assassinated yesterday.

300 Killed at Libau.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 30.—A telegram from Libau says that up to last night three hundred casualties had occurred in the fighting between troops and mutinous sailors. A large number of the mutineers have been arrested.

Russian Battleship Raised.

TOKIO, June 30.—The Russian battleship Presviet, sunk at Port Arthur has been successfully floated by the Japanese engineers.

Emperor Declares State of War.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 30.—The emperor has issued the following ukase addressed to the ruling senate:

"In order to guarantee public safety and to terminate the disorder at Odessa and district and to invest the commander of the troops in the military district of Odessa with the rights of civil administration for the defense of order and public tranquillity."

Another Rebel Warship.

LONDON, June 30.—The Express prints the following dispatch from Odessa timed midnight:

"A second mutinous warship is reported at Cape Fontaine, ten miles from here."

"At seven o'clock the rebel warship steamed two miles off, but shortly afterwards returned to its former anchorage and fired several shots at the suburb Langeron, where there is a detachment of Cossacks."

Fired on the City.

LONDON, June 30.—The Mail this morning prints the following from its Odessa correspondent, timed 10:40 Thursday night:

"Using full charges, the Kniaz Potemkin opened fire on the city this evening. The first shell struck

NO FIREARMS FOR FOURTH OF JULY

Will Be Started by Steamboat Lines At St. Louis.

St. Louis, Mo., June 30.—The announcement is made that the Ryman line of steamers of Nashville, Tenn., will start a boat in the St. Louis and Calhoun county, (Ill.) trade Saturday. This action, steamboat men declare, means a hot river war for business during the remainder of this season.

The trade in question is now being cared for by the steamer India Givens of the Calhoun packet company. The same company also owns the steamer Belle of Calhoun, now being repaired on the ways at Carondelet. When finished this boat also will be placed in the same trade. The Ryman line proposes to make three trips a week, and the other two boats are capable of making the same number. According to the plans, both boats will leave the wharf at the same time next Saturday.

To make the warfare more interesting, the Ryman line also intends to bring the steamer Electra here to run from St. Louis into the Lower Illinois river to accommodate trade of the east side of Calhoun county. In this stream the new company will come in close competition with the Eagle Packet company.

The Diamond Jo line steamers also touch some of the main landings in Calhoun country, and if the present plans are carried out the older inhabitants of the county are likely to think that the palmy days of steamboating have returned.

Cato Strow, alias Greer, colored, shot and instantly killed Walter Hughes, colored, near the Bud Simms' dance hall on Mill street in Mechanicsburg last night about 11:30 o'clock, the shooting being done in self-defense, it is said, and resulting from a quarrel over a dog.

Eye witnesses to the shooting claim that Strow and Hughes were talking about a small dog, which Hughes claimed wanted to bite him. Strow alleged that the dog would not bite and was only playing and finally after a few minutes discussion Hughes became enraged and started towards Strow with a knife. Strow grabbed a fence paling and struck Hughes. The paling broke and still Hughes advanced.

Strow then pulled his pistol and began to fire, shooting five times, one bullet penetrating the head. Hughes fell dead and Strow secured his hat which had fallen off in the fight, and left.

The shooting occurred just outside the city limits and Strow had fled when the police arrived. The body of the dead negro was brought to the Nance & Pool undertaking establishment in the patrol wagon and all the witnesses possible to secure summoned to appear and answer questions in the coroner's inquest.

The fight did not seem to have any effect on the dancers, the dance going on just the same after the corpse had been removed as before.

Hughes lived on Husbands street and was employed at one of the brick yards while Strow is a mill worker residing in Mechanicsburg. Strow is under size, while Hughes was a full grown and powerful man.

Prior to the inquest this morning Officers Clark and Brennan, of the Mechanicsburg beat, went out back of the Brooks' farm on the Calvert City road where Strow's father lived, thinking he had gone home. Officer Brennan remained behind and Officer Clark went to the house to find that father and son had left for town to surrender. Officer Brennan met the two as they came into "Casan" and took them to the hall.

Coroner James Crow this morning at 10 o'clock held an inquest over the body and the jury returned a verdict exonerating Strow. The verdict was as follows:

We, the jury, after being duly sworn, viewed the body of Walter Hughes, lying before us, came to his death by pistol shots fired by Cato Strow. We, the jury, find that Cato Strow acted in self-defense.

(Signed) Joe Ullman, James McNeill, J. W. Budton, A. W. Townsend, J. M. Clark, W. A. Wickliffe.

The dead man is understood to have relatives in Nashville, and they have been notified of his death. If they do not instruct Coroner Crow what to do the remains will be buried in the county graveyard this afternoon.

A One-Sided Argument.

You can't dispute what we say about the value of saving until you try it. And we wonder why you do not try it. After you start your account, if you decide you can't keep it up, drop it.

The peculiar thing about it is that you receive exactly as much when you close your account as when you started it. It costs nothing to try and your money does not depreciate. On the other hand it actually increases it stays here a year or six months. We pay 4 per cent compound interest. One dollar will start an account.

ences; one in the score, which was not quite so large in their favor, and the other in the game itself, it being even more of a farce than the first one.

Lane, the little college pitcher, with the elegant newspaper (Ky.) reputation, opened the ball and in the very first inning he walked three men. Eckstone pitched the second while Miller, a Central league man from Evansville, who had volunteered his services, was warming up. When finally Miller did get in the box in the third inning he was pounded all over the park and seemed at all times to be at the mercy of the Infants. Carnes pitched for the local bunch and kept his hits well scattered with the exception of one instance and even then the runs made by the visitors were not enough to cause the fans to feel even the slightest tremor.

Dunn the new catcher for Cairo, is a farce pure and simple. He allowed eight men to steal second on him and one stole home under his nose. Eddie Powers, who joined the team today, secured two hits out of three times up and played a fast game.

Paducah Players Return.

"Dutch" Dickey and Eddie Brabie, the Paducah battery which left here several weeks ago to join the Cherokee Indian baseball team, returned home last night, having quit the team. It seems that the Paducah boys did not like the accommodations and this with the fact that the management intends to immediately secure Indians exclusively, made it impossible for them to remain. They met with success in their work, winning most of the games they played. The teams played against by the Indians were all fast independent teams and some Trolley League teams. Brabie and Dickey left the Indians at Buffalo, N. Y.

Boylan was given his release last night and will likely sign with Hopkinsville. Boylan has a splendid assortment of benders and is released to make room for Bonno.—Vincennes Capital.

NO REWARD

CAN BE ISSUED FOR DORDEAUX
UNTIL THERE ARE CHARGES

Further Light On the $500 Bond Transaction—Comes Up Tomorrow.

J. S. Bordeaux, former manager of the Home Purchasing company, has not yet been located and all talk about the governor offering a reward for him is foolish, as there is no charge against him except a misdemeanor warrant in the police court, which probably would not justify any governor in turning him over to officers from this state should he be located somewhere else.

It is likely that nothing will be done until the books of the concern are straightened out and the receivers get their bearings. This will be sometime.

The question of who gets the $500 deposited with Chief of Police James Collins will be settled tomorrow by Judge Sanders. The money will undoubtedly be returned to W. C. O'Bryan, the real estate man. The facts in the transaction seem to be that when Bordeaux was arrested one night, he didn't want to go to the lockup, and O'Bryan, who was until recently in the Home Purchasing company, was sent for to go his bond. O'Bryan declined unless indemnified, and $500 worth of Home Purchasing company "exchange," whatever that is, was offered him. He refused to take it, and demanded that cash be deposited with him. Mr. G. B. Palmer, treasurer of the company, then produced $130 from his own pocket, and others got the remainder. The $500 was given to Mr. O'Bryan, who then gave his personal check for $500 as surety for Bordeaux's appearance in court.

All Mr. O'Bryan wants to do now is to protect himself. He has $500 belonging to someone, but whether to the Home Purchasing company or Mr. Palmer and the others individually, he does not know. He is willing that a fight be waged over the $500 he holds, it is understood, but he wants his own $500 at the city hall returned to him. If the court should order the $500 held by Chief Collins turned over to the Home Purchasing company receivers, Mr. Palmer and others who deposited money in Mr. O'Bryan's hands could then come and demand it of Mr. O'Bryan, claiming that the bond was not forfeited. Mr. O'Bryan would not only then have lost his own $500, but would have as well to give up the $500 which had been deposited with him to indemnify him in case Bordeaux forfeited his bond.

KENTUCKY NEWSLETS

Jolly Time Ahead.

Central City, Ky., June 30.—The annual meeting of the Green River Association of ex-Federal soldiers will be held this year at Central City, on July 4. An interesting program has been prepared, a prominent feature of which will be an old fashioned Kentucky dinner, which will be served free to all old soldiers and their families, regardless of whether the soldiers wore the blue or the gray. Extensive preparations are being made, and the occasion is expected to prove a regular love-fest. Well known speakers have been secured for the occasion.

More Foolishness.
Frankfort, Ky., June 30.—State Insurance Commissioner Prewitt will in his annual report recommend to the general assembly the enactment of a law prohibiting life insurance companies which pay executive officers in excess of $50,000 annual salary from soliciting business in Kentucky. The recommendation will prove a bombshell to the leading life companies. Commissioner Prewitt says "no man can in such capacity 'earn' $100,000 a year."

Events at Smithland.
Smithland, Ky., June 30.—Severe ugly wounds were inflicted upon John Snow's head and chest by Dallas Millott. Millott used a knife. One wound on the side of his face cut almost through. Another on the top of his head cut to the skull bone, and another in the chest reached to the hollow. Millott did not receive any hurt. Millott was paying Snow's daughter attention, objection to which caused the trouble. He will be given an examining trial Saturday before Judge Evans.

Wedding in Livingston.
Smithland, Ky., June 30.—Mr. Eddie Mayhugh and Miss Lizzie Williams, prominent young society people of the Panhandle country, were married at the home of the bride's father, Rev. R. L. Tally officiating.

Acquitted of Killing Her Husband.
Louisville, Ky., June 30.—After telling her story of how she fatally stabbed her husband, Fred Kimble, in an affray at their home on June 11, Mrs. Ida Kimble was dismissed by City Judge McCann, who said there was not a doubt of self-defense. Mrs. Kimble sobbed as she related how her husband was beating her, and after striking her 25 or 30 times, knocked her against a dresser, where her hand fell on a small pen knife she used for manicuring. In desperation she grabbed it and struck blindly at her husband. "I

Daily Thought.

"The moment you harbor doubt and begin to lose faith in yourself, you capitulate to the enemy."

A DIFFERENCE IN CONDITIONS.

The correspondent sent by the Chicago Tribune to study the system of municipal ownership in Great Britain and on the continent, says the Nashville Banner, makes the following statement in one of his letters: "In not a single city where municipal ownership has been studied at close range is there a system of municipal government which even approximates the opportunities for graft and political misrule common to American cities. Great Britain is a constitutional monarchy and France is a republic, and yet neither London nor Paris has a single executive municipal officer elected by the people. The president of the London County Council and the Prefect of the Seine, like the Burgermeister of Vienna and the Lord Provost of Glasgow, are independent of the people entirely."

Commenting on this, the Philadelphia Ledger says:

The all-powerful ruler of Paris, the Prefect of the Seine, is appointed by the national authority, and in Glasgow and in other British cities with municipal ownership the managers of public utilities are chosen by committees of the Council and are far removed from the whims or intrigues of politics. The selection of managers of utilities by committees of Councils would not work well here under present conditions, but in Great Britain the results are good because the members of the Council are the most substantial and most respected members of the communities which they represent, and positively beyond the breath of suspicion and scandal.

One of the reasons for the uniformly high character of the members of Councils, or, at any rate, one of the reasons why untrustworthy men cannot be readily elected to Councils, is found in the fact that the suffrage is limited to men with a stake in the community. A voter in Glasgow is either a house-owner or a householder or renter. There is positively no floating vote; the denizens of lodging-houses the colonized voters, the dregs of humanity who are marshaled in gangs to stuff the ballot box—"who disgrace the American cities by their influence on local government—have absolutely no voice in Scotland." Such a thing as a fraudulent vote is unheard of and unknown. The power which sways elections in some American cities is not present, and party politics does not enter into the question of municipal government. "Not over half the adult males of Glasgow have the right of suffrage, and municipal ownership flourishes best in those cities where the suffrage is most restricted."

President Roosevelt, in his address at the alumni dinner of Harvard University, urged a respect for and obedience to the law, on part of the rich as well as poor. Some people unfortunately seem to think the laws are for only the poor to obey, and vice versa. President Roosevelt has always tried to give all a square deal. His discussion of the laws as applied to people of all classes is timely. Our wealthy people, if they obeyed all the laws, would still be the target of the envious, the ignorant and the vicious, which would make their lot in some respects unpleasant under any circumstances. Therefore it behooves them to obey the strict letter of the law with more promptness and cheerfulness than it might the less fortunate, if they expect ever to diminish class hatred in America.

Evansville is preparing to let contracts for many blocks of new streets. Although asphalt has been used there for sometime, and paving bricks are manufactured there and can be bought without the extra cost of freight, Evansville will in all probability use the bitulithic material. The Evansville Journal-News says of a discussion of material before the board of public works: "Mr. Eichel says bitulithic is the only paving material, in his opinion, and he believes it will outlast asphalt. It has been tested sufficiently in several cities, notably St. Louis, where the Evansville board of public works inspected the streets recently. Mr. Eichel accompanied the party and he says his earlier formed opinion about the merits of the patented paving material were only re-enforced."

A Democratic paper calls attention to the dismissal of Minister Bowen, and to the decision of the government not to prosecute Mr. Paul Morton for rebates alleged to have been made by a railroad, and asks are these manifestations of a "square deal?" Most decidedly they are. Mr. Bowen was proven unfit for the diplomatic service, and out he went. Mr. Morton, it was shown, had nothing to do with rebates and it was giving him no more than a "square deal" when it was decided he was not subject to prosecution for violations of law committed by others without his knowledge and sanction.

According to a new state law which will go into effect July 1 in Illinois, sheriffs will have to discharge their duty when a lynching is threatened. The law provides that if a lynching occurs the sheriff must immediately vacate his office and the coroner of the county will take his place. He must appear before a tribunal and if he can give a satisfactory showing that he did everything possible to prevent the lynching he may then petition to be reinstated. These sort of laws will do more towards abolishing lynchings than all the argument, preaching and prosecution imaginable.

The revolt of Russian sailors on one of the czar's warships, the murder of officers and the seizure of the vessel, are something unprecedented in modern history, and the result is yet to be determined. Whether this act of mutiny was occasioned by the brutality of the officers, the dissatisfaction of sailors with existing conditions, or simply the inherent tendency of many of the Russians to destroy their own government, cannot be told; but it is certain to call the attention of the czar to the dangers that beset him on every hand, not the least of which is the treachery of his own subjects.

A subscriber writes to one of the Louisville papers protesting against the concerted condemnation of Judge Hargis and his crowd in Breathitt county, and suggests that perhaps they are not as black as painted. They might not be, and would still be black enough. Judge Hargis has repeatedly defied the remainder of the state, and boasted that he would "do as he damned please," and thus far he has kept his word.

Somebody ought to stop that practice over there in Norway. Nobody wants to see bantams fight.

Sixth and BroadwayCOURT OF APPEALS
Defines the Rights and Duties of Automobiles.

There are a great many automobiles in Paducah, and a great many more doubtless coming, hence the attitude of the courts towards the vehicles is of general interest to the automobile as well as to the general public.

The Kentucky court of appeals, in a recent decision, has in a measure defined the rights of automobile and the remainder of the public, in the following decision:

"While automobiles are a lawful means of conveyance, and have equal rights upon the public roads, with horses and carriages, their use should be accompanied with that degree of prudence in management, and consideration for the rights of others, which is consistent with their safety. If, as the jury found by their verdict, appellant knew or could have known by the exercise of ordinary care that the machine in his possession and under his control had so far excited appellees horse as to render him dangerous and unmanageable, it was his duty to have stopped his automobile, and taken such other steps for appellee's safety as ordinary prudence might suggest."

Why He Was Sad.

"What's the matter, old man?" he said as they met the next morning after. "You look blue."

"I feel blue."

"But last night you were the jolliest member of our party."

"I felt jolly."

"You acted like a boy just out of school."

"I felt like one."

"You said that your wife had gone away for the first time in three years and there wasn't any one to say a word if you went home and kicked over the mantel clock."

"I remember it."

"You said that if you stayed out until 4 o'clock there was no one to look at you reproachfully and sigh and make you feel mean."

"Yes, and I stayed out until 4 o'clock, didn't I?"

"You certainly did."

"And I gave a war whoop on the front doorstep?"

"Yes, and you sang a verse from a comic opera song and tried to do a clog dance."

"Yes, and my wife missed that train and didn't go. Now, please, go away and let me sorrow in silence."

Hens' Rights.

There is a story of an old New Hampshire doctor who, on taking out a wagon that had not been used for some time, found that a hen was sitting in it. He merely "harnessed up" without disturbing her, and he and his wife made a series of calls. The Boston Herald offers this true story of the town of Amesbury, which owns a small fire apparatus:

Outside the fire limits is a small community that, on petition, received an appropriation for the purchase of a "hand tub." It was installed in an abandoned blacksmith shop, where it remained for two years, used only for decorative purposes in street parades.

Last summer a stroke of lightning started a small fire in a farmhouse nearby. The volunteer department rallied at once, but when they arrived at the engine house the foreman stood at the door.

"Don't touch her, boys!" cried he. "I've got two hens settin' in the box. Let's use buckets."

They agreed, and the hens were allowed to pursue their incubating ways.

People and Pleasant Events

Pretty Church Wedding Last Evening.

The marriage of Miss Clara Moore and Mr. Hume Ogilvie was solemnized last evening at the Trimble St. Methodist church in the presence of a large number of friends of the popular couple. It was an exceedingly pretty ceremonial. The church was attractively decorated with palms and ferns. Mrs. Ben Billings presided at the organ playing the wedding march as the party entered. The only attendants were the ushers, Mr. Henry Moore, Mr. Robert Morrison, Mr. Richard Scott, Mr. Oscar Hank and Dr. William Owen and Mr. Aubrey Moore.

The bride, who is very attractive and handsome, looked especially so in a pretty gown of white organdy over silk, with the bridal veil. Her bouquet was bride roses and ferns. She entered with her brother, Mr. Frank Moore, who gave her away. The groom entered with his best man, Mr. Clarence Milam. They were met at the altar by Bishop Henry Clay Morrison, of New Orleans, an uncle of the bride, who performed the ceremony in a most impressive way. The two rings were used in the betrothal and it was especially beautiful.

Following the wedding ceremony a reception was given the bridal party and immediate relatives at the home of Mrs. Martin Smith on North 7th street. The house was effectively decorated in white, pink, and green, and it was a very delightful occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Ogilvie went out last evening to their home Woodland Place, on the Blandville road, where they will keep house. Mr. Ogilvie is a prominent young stock farmer in the county, and is the youngest son of the late Senator John W. Ogilvie of this district. His bride is of attractive personality and has been a leading teacher in the Paducah public schools. Both are popular socially, and have many friends in the city and county.

Married at Metropolis.

Mr. G. C. Jacobs and Miss Minnie Evitts were married at Metropolis Wednesday, and are at home at 1112 Tennessee street. The group is a well known I. C. machinist.

Miss Mary A. Wilkins and Mr. Robert Mariman were also married at Metropolis, and are visiting in Jonesboro, Ark. The groom is an I. C. fireman and the bride a daughter of Mr. H. W. Wilkins of 816 South 16th street.

Married in Fulton.

Mr. Charles E. Walker, a representative of the Green Shoe Co., of Louisville, a traveling man well known in Paducah, and Mrs. Susie Nooner, late of the "C" Institute, in Kenton, Tenn., were married yesterday in Fulton by Rev. W. G. Heffey, of the Methodist church.

The couple are well known in Fulton and in Western Tennessee. They passed through Paducah today en route to Grahamville, Ky., where they will reside.

THE FIRST TRAIN GOES OVER BRIDGE

Illinois Central Officials Went by on a Tour of Inspection.

The Tennessee River Bridge Not Yet
Open for Traffic, But Train
Goes Over.

OTHER RAILROAD HAPPENINGS

The first train to run over the new $1,000,000 steel bridge just finished by the I. C. at Gilbertsville, Ky., a few miles east of Paducah on the Paducah district of the I. C., passed over the new bridge this morning bearing the fourth vice-president of the road and several division officials.

Mr. W. J. Harahan, fourth vice-president of the I. C., accompanied by Superintendent A. H. Egan, Roadmaster F. L. Thompson, Trainmaster L. E. McCabe and Traveling Engineer Feeney, of the Louisville and Paducah districts, left Paducah this morning for Evansville with the intention of inspecting the bridge which is now complete and ready for service except possibly a few finishing touches to the machinery working the interlocking plant.

Mr. Harahan was seen at the depot this morning before he left on his special train and asked if the company would make any demonstration in opening the bridge. He stated that he did not know as this had been referred to other officials in Chicago. The bridge will be ready for actual service within the next three days, Mr. Harahan stated, and will probably be quietly placed in service.

Mr. Harahan came through from Wickliffe where he and Mr. Wm. Renshaw, superintendent of the I. C. and several other officials made an inspection of the work of cutting down the grade near Wickliffe. The remainder of the party went north last night, Mr. Harahan coming east this morning on the Cairo and Paducah accommodation train.

Most of the Illinois Central employees here as well as elsewhere are interested in the resignation of Chief Engineer J. F. Wallace, of the Panama canal, and in what the outcome will be. It is reported that the real reason Mr. Wallace resigned was that he was offered $60,000 a year by a big corporation and the government could not pay so much. It had been reported that he would go with the subway in New York, but this is authoritatively denied.

Mr. Wallace was formerly chief engineer for the Illinois Central, and when he went to Panama he took some of the I. C.'s best men with him, drawing from the highest to the lowest positions. What will become of these is now a matter of conjecture, but is supposed that most of them will return.

G. B. Young, a resident of Tyler, a suburb of Paducah on the Paducah district of the I. C., found a cross tie tightly wedged in between the rails last night shortly before 7 o'clock and reported the matter to the police department.

Officer James Flournoy, of the I. C. and Patrolman Henry Singery left the depot on a railroad tricycle and found that Young had gotten the tie out when they arrived. It is possible that some one placed the obstruction between the rails with the purpose of wrecking a train, but unlikely. The I. C. police are investigating the matter.

A washout occurred at Tallahatchie bridge, over the Tallahatchie river, 310 miles below here on the Illinois Central, at a point about midway between Water Valley and Grenada, Miss., about 6 o'clock last night which lowered the bridge fully ten inches below the level of the tracks running onto it.

The Tallahatchie river is small and given to sudden rises and is always carefully watched.

The sudden rise, due to a heavy rain fall during the past two days in that part of Mississippi has been expected and in consequence of the close inspection of the bridge its sinking was discovered before any one of the numerous trains running over it each hour had attempted to cross it.

The Return of SHERLOCK HOLMES

By A. CONAN DOYLE.

No. 3 of the Series

HOLMES had been seated for some hours in silence with his long, thin back curved over a chemical vessel in which he was brewing a practically malodorous product. His head was sunk upon his breast, and he looked from my point of view like a strange, thin bird with dull gray plumage and a black knot.

"So, Watson," said he suddenly, "you do not propose to invest in South African securities?"

I gave a start of astonishment. As accustomed as I was to Holmes' curious faculties, this sudden intrusion into my most intimate thoughts was utterly inexplicable.

"How on earth do you know that?" I asked.

He wheeled round upon his stool with a steaming test tube in his hand and a gleam of amusement in his deep set eyes.

"Now, Watson, confess yourself utterly taken aback," said he.

"I ought to make you sign a paper to that effect."

"Why?"

"Because in five minutes you will say that it is all so absurdly simple."

"I am sure that I shall say nothing of the kind."

"You see, my dear Watson"—he proped his test tube in the rack and began to lecture with the air of a professor addressing his class—"it is not really difficult to construct a series of inferences, each dependent upon its predecessor and each simple in itself. If after doing so, one simply knocks out all the audience inferences and presents one's audience with the starting point and the conclusion, one may produce a startling though possibly a meretricious effect. Now it was not really difficult by an inspection of the groove between your left forefinger and thumb to feel sure that you did not propose to invest your small capital in the gold fields."

"I see no connection."

"Very likely not, but I can quickly show you a close connection. Here are the missing links of the very simple chain. First, you had chalk between your left finger and thumb when you returned from the club last night; second, you put chalk there when you play billiards to steady the case; third, you never play billiards except with Thurston; fourth, you told me four weeks ago that Thurston had an option on some South African property which would expire in a month and which he desired you to share with him; fifth, your check book is locked in my drawer, and you have not asked for the key; sixth, you do not propose to invest your money in this manner."

"How absurdly simple!" I cried.

"Quite so," said he, a little nettled. "Every problem becomes very childish when once it is explained to you. Here is an unexplained one. See what you can make of that, friend Watson." He tossed a sheet of paper upon the table and turned once more to his chemical analysis.

I looked with amazement at the absurd hieroglyphics upon the paper.

"Why, Holmes, it is a child's drawing!" I cried.

"Oh, that's your idea!"

"What else should it be?"

"That is what Mr. Hilton Cubitt of Riding Thorpe Manor, Norfolk, is very anxious to know. This little conundrum came by the first post, and he was to follow by the next train. There's a ring at the bell, Watson. I should not be very much surprised if this were it."

A heavy step was heard upon the stairs, and an instant later there entered a tall, rotund, clean shaven gentleman whose clear eyes and broad checks told of a life led far from the fog of Baker street. He seemed to bring a whiff of his strong, fresh, bracing east coast air with him as he entered. Having shaken hands with each of us, he was about to sit down when his eye rested upon the paper with the curious markings which I had just examined and left upon the table.

"Well, Mr. Holmes, what do you make of these?" he cried. "They told me that you were fond of queer mysteries, and I don't think you can find a queerer one than that. I sent the paper on ahead, so that you might have time to look at it before I came."

"It is certainly rather a curious production," said Holmes. "At first sight it would appear to be some childish prank. It consists of a number of absurd little figures dancing across the paper upon which they are drawn. Why should you attribute any importance to it?"

"Then I will help you with all my heart. In the first place, have you heard of any strangers being seen in your neighborhood?"

"I never should, Mr. Holmes, but my wife does. It is frightening her to death. She says nothing, but I can see terror in her eyes. That's why I want to sift the matter to the bottom."

Holmes held up the paper so that the sunlight shone full upon it. It was a page torn from a notebook. The markings were done in pencil and ran in this way:

Holmes examined it for some time, and then, folding it carefully up, he placed it in his pocketbook.

"This promises to be a most interesting and unusual case," said he. "You gave me a few particulars in your letter, Mr. Hilton Cubitt, but I should be very much obliged if you would kindly go over it all again for the benefit of my friend, Dr. Watson."

"I'm not much of a story teller," said our visitor, nervously clasping and unclasping his great, strong hands. "You will just ask me anything that I don't make clear. I'll begin at the time of my marriage last year, but I want to say first of all that, though I'm not a rich man, my people have been at Riding Thorpe for a matter of five centuries, and there is no better known family in the county of Norfolk. Last year I came up to London for the jubilee, and I stopped at a boarding house in Russell square, because Parker, the vicar of our parish, was staying in it."

"There was an American young lady there—Patrick was the name—Elsie Patrick. In some way we became friends, until before my month was up I was as much in love as a man could be. We were quietly married at a registry office, and we returned to Norfolk, wedded couple. You'll think it very mad, Mr. Holmes, that a man of a good old family should marry a wife in this fashion, knowing nothing of her past or of her people, but if you saw her and knew her it would help you to understand."

"She was very straight about it, was Elsie. I can't say that she did not give me every chance of getting out of it if I wished to do so. 'I have had some very disagreeable associations in my life,' said she, 'I wish to forget all about them. I would rather never allude to the past, for it is very painful to me. If you take me, Hilton, you will take a woman who has nothing that she need be personally ashamed of, but you will have to be content with my word for it and to allow me to be silent as to all that passed up to the time when I became yours. If these conditions are too hard, then go back to Norfolk and leave me to the lonely life in which you found me.' It was only a day before our wedding that she said those very words to me. I told her that I was content to take her on her own terms, and I have been as good as my word."

"Well, we have been married now for a year, and very happy we have been. But about a month ago, at the end of June, I saw for the first time signs of trouble. One day my wife received a letter from America. I saw the American stamp. She turned deadly white, read the letter and threw it into the fire. She made no allusion to it afterward, and I made none, for it is a promise, but she has never known an easy hour from that moment. There is always a look of fear upon her face—a look as if she were waiting and expecting. She would do better to trust me. She would find that I was her best friend. But until she speaks I can say nothing. Mind you, she is a truthful woman, Mr. Holmes, and whatever trouble there may have been in her past life it has been no fault of hers. I am only a simple Norfolk squire, but there is not a man in England who ranks his family honor more highly than I do. She knows it well, and she knew it well before she married me. She would never bring any stain upon it; of that I am sure."

"Well, now I come to the queer part of my story. About a week ago—it was the Tuesday of last week—I found on one of the window sills a number of absurd little dancing figures like these upon the paper. They were scrawled with chalk. I thought that it was the stable boy who had drawn them, but the lad swore he knew nothing about it. Anyhow, they had come there during the night. I had them washed out, and I only mentioned the matter to my wife afterward. To my surprise she took it very seriously and begged me if any more came to let her see them. None did come for a week, and then yesterday morning I found this paper lying on the sundial in the garden. I showed it to Elsie, and down she dropped in a dead faint. Since then she has looked like a woman in a dream, half dazed and with terror always lurking in her eyes. It was then that I wrote and sent the paper to you, Mr. Holmes. It was not a thing that I could take to the police, for they would have laughed at me, but you will tell me what to do. I am not a rich man, but if there is any danger threatening my little woman I would spend my last copper to shield her."

He was a fine creature, this man of the old English soil—simple, straight and gentle, with his great, earnest blue eyes and broad, comely face. His love for his wife and his trust in her shone in his features. Holmes had listened to his story with the utmost attention, and now he sat for some time in silent thought.

"Don't you think, Mr. Cubitt," said he, "that your best plan would be to make a direct appeal to your wife and to ask her to share her secret with you?"

Holmes shuddered his massive head. "A promise is a promise, Mr. Holmes. If Elsie wished to tell me she would. If not, it is not for me to force her confidence. But I am justified in taking my own line—and I will."

"Then I will help you with all my heart. In the first place, have you heard of any strangers being seen in your neighborhood?"

"I never should, Mr. Holmes, but my wife does. It is frightening her to death. She says nothing, but I can see terror in her eyes. That's why I want to sift the matter to the bottom."

"No."

"I presume that it is a very quiet place. Any fresh face would cause comment?"

"In the immediate neighborhood, yes. But we have several small watering places not very far away. And the farmers take in lodgers."

"These hieroglyphics have evidently a meaning. If it is a purely arbitrary one it may be impossible for us to solve it. If, on the other hand, it is systematic, I have no doubt that we shall get to the bottom of it. But this particular sample is so short that I can do nothing, and the facts which you have brought me are so indefinite that we have no basis for an investigation. I would suggest that you return to Norfolk, that you keep a keen lookout and that you take an exact copy of any fresh dancing men which may appear. It is a thousand pities that we have not a reproduction of those which were done in chalk upon the window sill. Make a discreet inquiry also as to any strangers in the neighborhood. When you have collected some fresh evidence come to me again. That is the best advice which I can give you, Mr. Hilton Cubitt. If there are any pressing fresh developments I shall be always ready to run down and see you in your Norfolk home."

The interview left Sherlock Holmes very thoughtful, and several times in the next few days I saw him take his slip of paper from his notebook and look long and earnestly at the curious figures inscribed upon it. He made no allusion to the affair, however, until one afternoon a fortnight or so later I was going out when he called me back.

"You had better stay here, Watson."

"Why?"

To be continued.

The more haste men make, for happiness the less intimate acquaintances they get with it.

Weak Stomach.

A weak stomach is most frequently caused by the over-worked and exhausted nervous system.

The power that runs the stomach is the nerve force sent to it from the brain through the nerves. When the nerves are weak or exhausted the supply of energy is insufficient and the action of the stomach is impaired, and results in imperfect digestion—dyspepsia.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine increases nerve force. It strengthens and builds up nerve tissue, gives vigor to the nerves and muscles of the stomach and impairs, and results in imperfect digestion—dyspepsia.

"Given away, Elbert," she repeated. "You haven't given away."

"Every cent," I cried gayly, leading her to a seat. "Just got the business finished. I'm your penniless man. Now when will you marry me?"

She stared at me, her eyes round and amazed. Then she laughed nervously.

"I have, too," she gasped.

"How what, darling?" I queried.

"Given everything away. I was just writing to you that I cared more for you than for my wretched money; and it's all gone, gone, gone."

"Never mind, little girl. We have each proved our love. Now we will start in and live as our grandparents did. I will buy a ranch!"

"My grandparents didn't, and you haven't any money, Elbert."

"Oh, that's so. Well, I will go and work for a rancher, then, and you can help the rancher's wife. You can make butter and feed the hens and—feed the pigs, can't you?"

She held up her little white hands, and I covered them with kisses. Then she put them, one on each side of my face, and looked steadily into my eyes.

"Elbert, I will try if the rancher's wife will have patience with me."

"To whom did you give your fortune?" I asked after a minute.

"To the church for an orphanage."

Her lips were quivering again, so I said hastily.

"Well, sweetheart, go put on your plainest gown, as befits a poor man's bride, and we will go at once to the parsonage."

I laughed when she came back. Her "plainest gown" was simple and white, but probably cost as much as I could earn on the ranch in a year.

"The minister lent me the money for the license and has promised to wait till I got my first month's wages for that and his fee," I explained as we walked along.

Pauline's face flushed and she looked up piteously.

" Didn't you save out enough for the ring—my wedding ring?" she whispered.

"Made a clean sweep of everything," I answered cheerfully. "except my clothes. I didn't think my er—beneficiary would care for those."

She gave a patient sigh.

"You will get me a ring as soon as you can, won't you, Elbert? I shan't feel married without a wedding ring."

The Atavism Of Pauline

By INA WRIGHT HANSON

Copyright, 1905, by Isa Wright Hanson

It was sunny where we sat at Sutro heights, between the white statues of "Prometheus" and "Femme au serpent." At our left stretched a smooth red road.

"The road of love, and it leads to paradise," I remarked.

Pauline was silent. Her dreamy eyes gazed beyond the little waves lapping in toward shore out to the bank of fog which circled the waters, as if to shut us two, there in the sunshine, away from the whole world. My glance lingered on Pauline's rippling brown hair, on her sweet little nose, on her mouth, and I gave one long sigh of content.

"Pauline," I said, "will you marry me?"

"No," she answered.

Her tone was caressing, but it held uncompromising firmness. The fog was coming closer in.

"Why?"

Pauline turned her gray eyes from the ocean to me.

"One thing that lackest," she quoted softly. "Go sell what thou hast and give to the poor."

I stared blankly at her. Was this child of luxury, this butterfly of fashion?

"I don't say it is original, Elbert. For generations back there's been every now and then some one of our family who has believed and practiced it. I suppose the mantel of these peculiar ancestors has fallen upon me, for it has been a life principle with me."

THE LONG LANE

[Copyright, 1905, by T. C. McClure.]
The room was unlighted save for the fire on the hearth, which snapped and crackled and sent weird, distorted shadows about the walls.

Barrington sat near the fire, which lighted his heavy features uncannily and showed plainly the drawn, hard lines about his mouth. Barbara Allen had withdrawn to the shadows of a far corner and divided her time between a playful Angora kitten and covert glances in the young man's direction. Now and again as his brows knit in an angry frown she smiled knowingly as she smoothed the kitten's silky coat.

Presently the young man whirled about in his chair and glared into the gloom of the corner where the girl's face was but barely visible.

"I suppose," he said, with bitter sarcasm, "that I should have known from the beginning where we would come out with this little affair of ours. I suppose I should have taken warning from the countless predecessors who have tempted fate before me. But a man in love is blind to many things, and I find I've been no exception to this general rule."

The girl in the corner bent over the kitten, but made no reply. Barrington kicked back an ember which hurtled from the fire and continued:

"I didn't think you were that sort of a girl. I fondly imagined, in my blessed innocence, that you had some spirit of fairness. I find I've been mistaken—and more."

"Be careful, Fritz," she said warningly. "You're saying some rather harsh things."

He laughed roughly. "It's hardly the time to mince matters," said he. "I'm well aware that the truth isn't always pleasant to hear, but I think you'll admit there are times when circumstances warrant its utterance. You have known from the first that I was honest and sincere. You knew I was no trifler. You might at least have let me know from the outset that my case was hopeless instead of dragging it on in this wretched fashion."

The girl sighed patiently.

"I've merely tried to be nice—in a friendly way," she protested.

"Oh, you've succeeded admirably," said he. "You've been very, very nice. It was necessary to do that to keep me in line, I suppose."

"Kindly be a trifle considerate," she said coldly.

"Do you deserve consideration?" he asked.

"Perhaps not," she said, with a meekness that faulned the fires of his wrath.

"I tell you," he declared, "it's a dangerous game you play, and some time it will go against you. There'll come a time when the glove will be on the other hand. It's a long lane that has no turning."

The rapid succession of metaphors set her smiling again. She leaned forward in her chair.

"And at the turn of the lane—what then?" she asked.

He frowned savagely at the fire.

"At the turn of the lane," said he, "you'll see it all from my present perspective. You'll know what it is to love honestly—only to provoke laughter."

She stroked the kitten thoughtfully.

"Fritz," she said, with a little note of awe—whether real or mocking, he could not decide—in her voice, "you frighten me."

"It will come," he said flatly.

He rose and picked up his hat and coat. He looked up tall and forbidding in the flickering firelight.

"I'm going now," he said, "but before I do I want to ask a favor of you. Don't treat the next chap as you've treated me."

Barbara rose too. She spilled the kitten onto the floor and came over to Barrington's side.

"We're friends, aren't we?" she asked anxiously.

"Yes, we're friends," he said.

"You won't forget me because of this—you won't let this be a barrier between us?" she asked.

He looked down at her and smiled slowly.

"We'll be friends," he said enigmatically.

The truth of the situation dawned on her suddenly. It left her a trifle dismayed.

"You don't mean you're not coming here again? You don't mean you'll avoid me?" she asked.

"I think it is the only way to insure our friendship," said he.

"Oh!" she said in sudden contrition.

He drew himself up with an effort.

"Well, goodby," he said, holding out his hand.

The girl seemed not to notice it. She leaned against a chair.

"Goodby," he said again.

"Don't—don't go—like this," she said in entreaty.

He looked at her questioningly, then strolled to the door.

"Don't go!" she whispered weakly.

He turned. "Why not?" he demanded abruptly.

She flushed and hesitated. She saw it was too late to retreat.

"Well," she said, looking into the fire, "there's a turn in the lane, you know, and—and I think we've reached it now, Fritz, dear."

death by killing all the officers.

As the news spread large crowds, consisting mainly of riotous strikers and their following, flocked to the quay and passed with bared heads, respectfully saluting the dead. The police, supported by Cossacks, tried to disperse the crowd and remove the body but the crowd surrounded the coffin and defied them to touch it. Before there was a definite result the Kniaz Potemkin Tavritchesky hoisted signals that the body was to be left on the quay; that it would be taken on board later for burial at sundown with full naval honors, and that if the authorities interfered the battleship would immediately bombard the city. This threat, emphasized by the sight of the muzzle of the ship's 12-inch guns leveled at the port, had its effect. The police and troops were called off, and the coffin remained surrounded by the sympathizing, angry crowd.

Meanwhile the battleship was rapidly coaling from the Esperanza, while the authorities conferred on how to act. The governor telegraphed to St. Petersburg and Sebastopol, asking the authorities at the latter place to send a fleet. It was evident that the authorities realized their helplessness. Any attempt at force would have undoubtedly led to a realization of the mutineers' threat to bombard the city. Moreover, there is reason to believe they distrusted the loyalty of the troops; therefore, beyond posting strong guards at the government offices, banks and other public buildings, the officials could do little to protect the town or allay the panic which seized a large portion of the inhabitants.

The girl sighed patiently.

"I've merely tried to be nice—in a friendly way," she protested.
